Residents Urged to Monitor Pilot Lights of Burners and Heaters in Areas Without Power

JERSEYCITY – Mayor Jerramiah T. Healy and OEM officials urged residents to monitor pilot lights on gas burning furnaces and or heaters in their homes or to turn gas feeds off until power is restored.

Officials, acting upon advice from PSE&G, advised that residents who may have had flooding in their basements, to check the pilot lights in their furnaces or water heaters. If the lights are out residents should ventilate the room; re-light the pilot light; or turn the gas off completely until full power is restored to the home.

“This safety step can prevent accidental ignition of natural gas being fed to the home,” Healy said.
